The Virtual CFO Playbook for Growing Businesses

What a virtual CFO actually does, when you need one, and the monthly pack every founder should receive.

October 2026 · www.allnineservices.com

When does a business need a CFO?

Usually earlier than founders think. Typical triggers are raising capital, revenue reaching a level where cash gets tight, expanding into a new market, or a board that wants better numbers.

What a virtual CFO does

- Financial planning & analysis: annual budget, rolling forecasts and variance analysis.
- Cash flow & working capital: 13-week cash forecasts and discipline on receivables and payables.
- Reporting: a monthly MIS pack your leadership team actually reads.
- Fundraising readiness: financial model, data room and support with investor questions.
- Controls: approval matrices, month-end close and audit readiness.

The monthly pack we recommend

1. One-page dashboard: revenue, gross margin, EBITDA, cash and runway.
2. Profit & loss against budget and last year, with commentary.
3. Cash flow and a 13-week forward view.
4. Receivables ageing and top risks.
5. Decisions needed from leadership this month.

Working with All Nine

Our virtual CFO engagements are scoped to your stage, from a few days a month to an embedded finance lead, and work alongside your existing accountants.
